FATE OF THE MEN IMPRISONED IN THE DUNBAR COAL PIT.

The Rescuers Reach the Shaft to the Mine
Only to Find the Subterranean Tunnel
a Mass of Flames—Some of the Danger Encountered by the Workers—What Was

By Telegram to the POST-DISPATCH.

DUNBAR, Pa., June 28.—All hope is lost finding alive the thirty-two men imprisoned in the Farn Hill mine. At 8:30 o'clock last night the sky was illumined by flames which burst from the mouth of the shaft. It was the signal of triumph and victory, marked by the

to the anxious watchers who have hoped for long against what was almost a certainty. Kforia are still being made.

Enter the Farm Hill Mine. It is the drift that has been run from the Miehoning Mine. Almost at the moment that the flames burst from the Farm Hill, Jesse Leisner, one of the workers in the other mine, pushed his drill through into the entry. Miners have been so steadily working toward the last ten days. The rescuers' lamp began to burn brighter, showing that the air was getting better. The men were at once ordered out of the mine, while the inspectors remained behind to decide what was best to do. They did not desire that anyone should be exposed to unnecessary danger.

DISCUSSING THE DANGER.

"It is hell, when we expected heaven," said Secretary Watchorn, who was sent here by the Knights of Labor. Near him when he made this remark sat the four inspectors who were off duty. They were Adams, Evans, King and Loult. They were discussing the gravity of the situation in undertones. To their left stood Mr. Hazard, Vice-President of the company, who quietly watched the evidence of the disaster. His face was pale and beyond recall. The inspectors, however, they have never seen such a sight in all their experience. They were badly worried, for the question which stared them in the face was abandonment of the work of rescue. "We've

"I hope of finding the man alive is gone," said one of them, and the remaining three agreed to "Aren't you going to continue the work?" asked the Secretary Watchorn as he rose from his seat.

"That is the question we are discussing," was the answer and the consultation proceeded.

"I think it is absolutely dangerous to proceed at present, said the Secretary. "If we could have made an opening before this man could have known the fate of the man."

THE CONSULTATION

thus broke up, to be renewed at the mouth of the Mahoning river, where the inspectors had been hurriedly called from the inside of the mine. Inspectors Keighly, Evans, Adams and the man had struck the point almost within six inches, and had accomplished

In five minutes after life had bubbled over the crowd had ceased the motion of life. The crowd had climbed the hill and was now on the roof of the Farm dam. Men at once began to work to knock down the building. Another group was working to reach the mouth of the pit in the hope of pulling the man out. But all this was too late. The man had been buried under the slope of the dam and was beyond recovery. The representative of the District Council was present and was very much surprised to find that the man had been buried under the dam.

mines had expected the fire to break out and streams of water had, been kept running over the mouth of the pit and every precaution possible had been taken. When the fire will burn itself out is beyond human knowledge. There are 600 feet of timber saturated with oil, except gasolene and kerosene. The fire which has been burning since the explosion is only gathering fresh strength. It was a terrible sight as the flames leaped thirty feet into the air. It lighted up the country for miles around.

The Work of Rescue Resumed.

DUNBAR, Pa., June 28.—Again are the rescuers and relatives of the thirty-one entombed miners doomed to disappointment. The four brave men who took their lives in their hands when they went into the Mahoning pit last night were killed and their bodies were found.

The regular shift started in again, and the brave but disheartened men once more are searching for an entry that will lead them into the treasure. The rescuers doubt they are wrong and think that they must not abandon the search until they have accomplished their purpose and returned home. They are determined to force their way through the door and give up the task. The first fire forces them to burn with great fierceness this morning, and immense volumes of smoke and flames are being leaving from the mouth of the pit.

SPARKLING GEMS.

They Had Been Steadily Going Down Since 1875—Americans Take Millions of Dollars' Worth of Them, Consequently They Are Interested—Causes of the Change—Highest and Lowest Quotations for Many

The spirit of combination from which Belday argues such great things in the year 2000 has reached at last one of the great necessities of the world, the clothing industry. The C. & P. Corp. report a big advance in the wearing apparel business, the business of the future, bringing from 40 to 50 per cent higher prices than ruled four months ago. They are now worth several dollars a bushel, and those who laid in a supply when the market was down at 10 cents a bushel are now rich. The market is deteriorating in price since 1895, and became attainable to people of quite moderate means. The newspaper reporters of the costumes and ornaments worn at public affairs testify to this, for one reads "diamond ornaments" after the dearest and almost every gown. In days to come, however, those "magic mirrors-moonstones" will have to supply the place of the iridescent gem. Every school boy knows that the diamonds are not found in the United States and Brazil, and all these mines—and they are not so many as might be supposed—have come under the complete control of a small, but very strong syndicate. As a consequence, the price has risen during the past twelve months over 200 per cent on the uncut stones. Mr. Rhodes, the diamond millionaire, is the president, elected by a large number of gentlemen, the heads of various firms who are in the diamond business. The buyer may ask, "how is it that with the diamond prices have not risen so far at the retail stores this year?" The answer is very simple. The cutters intervene between the miner and the retailers, and they are men of great ability and energy. They are compelled to buy the stones of a company of millionaires who own the mines and sell to the retail dealers of our principal cities. Generally the retailer has a heavy stock on hand and is not in a position to purchase from the mine. In consequence of this the mine dealer is obliged to sell to the retail dealer at a profit. Several big retailers in New York and London have been buying from the cut-outs, and in consequence of this the retailers in advance of former prices as the cut-outs were compelled to sell, for the stones in the hands of the world and here the cut-outs from Antwerp and Amsterdam, who come to buy, are not able to pay for the stones. In consequence of a rule they buy on credit. When their bills come due they are obliged to pay for the stones at a sacrifice and their necessities have kept the price of our diamonds down. Now that the cut-outs have been driven out of business, and the combination, the shop prices must come up to meet the new schedule of cost prices. The price of diamonds is going to be higher. The invention is the discovery of new mines; but even in the case of the new mines, the cut-outs will soon get these within their ring. At present there is considerable activity in South Africa, and it is probable that there will be some of the mines which had not been worked for the De Beers. Kimberley consist of four pits—the De Beers, Kimberley, Bulfontein and Dutoitspan. Originally the mines were worked by 500 to 550 men, who were paid by diggers and worked in a very primitive way. In the course of time small companies were formed, some of them as big as a hundred or more men. These companies were gradually merged and formed into larger companies until the De Beers consolidated company was established. The De Beers company now owns 50 per cent of the pits. At least it now holds the whole of the De Beers, the Kimberley and Bulfontein pits. The Dutoitspan is owned by a company and has nearly all of the Dutoitspan with a

PROSPECT OF GOOD GAINING THE WHOLE.
The Dutoitspan is the largest and is now controlled by the De Beers Company. It is that of the Gordon Diamond Co. in the Dutoitspan.

The average annual production of the four pits is 4,000,000 carats of diamonds, the De Beers 1,000,000, the Bultfontein 1,000,000, the Dutoitspan 1,000,000 and the Jagersfontein 1,000,000. The stones from the first three pits are of a higher quality than those from the Dutoitspan are better, and sell for a much higher price. In proportion to the size of the pits, the Dutoitspan produces the best quality stones. The De Beers and Kimberley yield 125 carats of stones to 100 loads of "blue," the Bultfontein gives 100 carats to 100 loads, and the Dutoitspan 250 carats to 100 loads. The Dutoitspan is the same amount of "blue," but in consequence, the latter two have been closed, and only the most profitable mine worked, making a large quantity of stones which cannot fall to market at a very bullish market.

The large dealers of London are expecting a large quantity of stones to come to market, but it will not come until late in the year, as most of the large retailers have big stocks on hand.

Then the Cape discoveries sent them down to 26. If they don't find new mines they may go as high as before. It is not higher. In the time mention America took out a few states and now. Now the Americans take millions of pounds' worth, and they are the richest customers and want the finest goods. The rise may cause a shortage of goods for the time. But goods will be a benefit to the time.

In August, 1883, a correspondent of the New York Sun sent the story of a duel that took place on the banks of the Pecos River:

Gus Davis of Philadelphia, came here several months ago and was engaged as a cattle order by John Shure. Davis soon showed himself to be a useful man and gained the esteem of his employer and the envy of the other herders. In less than three months he had resisted so many temptations to quarrel with his associates that he was nicknamed "The Northern Coward."

On the morning of August 7, while Davis was on duty looking after his cattle, Jesus Garcia, a Mexican, saluted him as usual with "Good morning, Northern Coward." "and Mr.

Further action was restricted by the fact that the London Sugar Refineries rose 1 per cent to 719, but the seasonal price differential brought upon the list was everything else. The Chicago Gas, which again has some active and decided buyers, advanced 1/8 cent, while the oil was sufficient to wipe out the early gains and it dropped to $7.60 to $7.65, and Oregon Transcontinental from $7.60 to $7.55. The stock market movement began suddenly and with it Chicago went to 55 1/2; extreme dullness marked the remainder of the session, however, and the market closed at 55 1/2 and steady at about opening prices.

A Ministerial Order

A Minister's Story.
A minister and his little boy cured of obstinate skin diseases by the Cuticura Remedies. Praises them everywhere—in the pulpit, home, and in the street.

Cured by Cuticura.

For about thirteen years I have been troubled with eczema or some other cutaneous disease which all remedies failed to cure. Hearing of the Cures

REMEDIES I resolved to give them a trial. I followed the directions carefully, and it afforded me the greatest relief. I used CUTICURA SOAP, the CUTICURA, four cakes of CUTICURA SOAP, or one bottle of CUTICURA RESOLVENT. I was entirely cured.

In addition to my own case my baby boy, about 5 months old, was suffering with what supposed to be the same disease as mine, to wit: a thick crusty head was coated over with a scab, from which he was so much distressed that he was sickening to look upon, besides the large tumor-like kernels on the back of his head. I used the wonderful CUTICURA REMEDY, and his scalp is perfectly clear, and the tumor-like kernels scattered so that there is only one little place by his left ear, and that is healing nicely. Instead of being so much distressed, he is now much more contented than that which was destroyed by the scab.

use. I would that the whole world of sufferers from skin and blood diseases knew the value of your CUTICURA REMEDY—as I do. CUTICURA RESOLVES

And CUTICURA SOAP are worth ten times the price & which they are sold, have not been used any other toilet soap in my house since I bought them. I am a user of your CUTICURA SOAP. I would be inhuman as well as ungrateful should I fail to speak well of and recommend them to every sufferer. I have spoken of it, and shall continue to speak of it from the pulpits in the homes, and in the streets. Praying that you may live long, and do others the same amount of good you have done me and the cause of your gratefulty, (REV.) C. M. MANNING,
Box 28, Acworth, Ga.
